The fence semi trailer is a type of semi trailer specifically designed for transporting various goods. Its most notable feature is the fence like structure on top of the cargo area. This design not only effectively prevents cargo from falling during transit but also enhances the safety and stability of the load. The fence semi trailer are widely used in long distance transportation and are particularly suited for carrying livestock, vegetables, fruits, and other goods that require good ventilation.

The frame of the fence semi trailer is usually made of high strength steel, ensuring that it has sufficient strength and durability when carrying heavy loads. The fence structure installed on the frame can have its height and spacing customized according to the type of cargo being transported. The fence is typically modular in design, allowing for easy assembly and disassembly. This enables users to adjust the fence height or even completely remove it based on different cargo types, enhancing the vehicle's versatility.

Due to the open design of the fence, the fence semi trailer is especially suitable for transporting goods that require ventilation, such as livestock or fresh agricultural products. Additionally, the cargo area is usually equipped with drainage holes at the bottom for easy cleaning.

The multi purpose design of the fence semi trailer allows it to transport various types of goods, providing great flexibility to meet different transportation needs. The open design of the fence reduces the enclosed nature of the cargo area, significantly improving the speed of loading and unloading. Moreover, with its large carrying capacity, the vehicle can transport more goods in one trip, thereby reducing transportation costs.

With its unique structural design and versatility, the fence semi trailer has become an important part of the modern logistics industry. Whether transporting livestock, agricultural products, or construction materials, the fence semi-trailer meets various transportation needs with its stability, safety, and efficiency.
